The EmpowerED Series™

Engagement vs. Empowerment Keys to School Transformation

Drew Schwartz

Schools throughout the nation have been led astray by the idea that “engagement” is the target educators should aspire towards. Together, our facilitator will map out the benefits of engagement while also examining the components of empowerment, which involves student strengths, agency, activated purpose and more! Educators that tap into empowerment, investing in student’s internal resources and helping to set the conditions for them to ignite their own drive, experience unprecedented success.

With the paradigm shift and practical tools introduced, educators will address outcomes including:

- Develop strategies to increase student efficacy
- Dive into student motivation theory
- Discover actions to expand growth mindset

"We always hear that an educator's goal is to help students become self-learners who are intrinsically motivated. How? After 15 years of teaching, this course taught me how."

- Suzanne Winemiller Baltimore, MD
